THE FAMOUS

"J. I. C., the celebrated trotting horse, (named after his owner J. I. Case, Esq.,) was recently entered at Prospect Park, Brooklyn, to lower his own record of 2.10, so as to beat "Maud S," Vanderbilt's great mare, the fastest animal on record. and whose time was 2.09%. The excitement was intense, 6,000 people having assembled to witness the contest, every one being eager and expectantly looking for the favorite to appear. At about 3 o'clock p. m. "J. I. C.," amid tremendous applause, came down the track, passing the Grand Stand of the Judges, throwing first one ear and then the other forward, as if in recognition of the cheering of the crowd, then passing once around the race course, just to get warmed up and prepare himself for the race, the excitement running higher every minute, until "He is off! He is off!" echoed through the crowd. And sure enough, he was off! With rapid strides he moved on, on, increasing his speed at every step, fairly flying through the air, as if by magic, passing around the curves like a whirlwind; then coming in plain view of the spectators, everybody on tip-toe, and the excitement of the people was at fever heat to get a glimpse of the beautiful black steed as he dashed along. Passing by the Grand Stand he slacked up, and after returning in front of the Judges' Stand, in a few moments the Board announced the record at 2.18, at the second trial at 2.14, and the third time at 2.12½.

The Convict System.

House of Representatives to regulate the working of convicts hired out from the penitentiary by which the supervision, control and punishment of such convicts is given to a deputy superintendent to he half to be naid.

Mr. Parker moved an amendment to the first Section, which strikes out from the bill the clause providing: "And the party hiring shall have no control, but may direct what labor shall be done, and such orders shall be executed by the is given to a deputy superintendent appointed by the State and to be paid by the parties hiring the convicts through

Mr. Haskell said that the Bill was almost identical with one which the House had passed almost unanimously at convicts—that is manifestly impossible at the present time on account of the inadequate accommodations for convicts words "exclusive control" which was then within the walls of the penitentiary. It made necessary by the adoption of the is a fact that the deaths among convicts hired out without the control and super- M vision of the Superintendent was over thirty per cent., while, under such superhumanity that a system which produced such results should be remedied, if pos-

Mr. Lee of Sumter opposed the bill and hoped that the enacting clause would be stricken out. The vote was then taken on the mo tion to strike out, and the result, when announced by the Speaker was, yeas 45, nays 45. The Speaker voted may and the effort to kill the measure failed. Then came the nost earnest, protracted and able debates; which have yet occurred in the House, displaying on both sides a mastery of the subject in all hours constituting the day's work. its aspects, and a common purpose, though by different methods, to secure a more bumane management of the con-

Mr. Hemphill said that the bill virtually destroyed the system of hiring out convicts, for it hedged about the hiring with conditions so onerous as to act as an absolute bar to the making of con tracts for their hire outside of the peni-

Mr. Haskell had hoped that the neces sity would not have been forced on the friends of this measure to lift the curtain upon one of the darkest pictures which has disgraced the history of our State Government. But he was impelled to state the truth in this matter so plainly that members would be compelled to face the responsibility which a vote on this question would involve. He gave facts and figures respecting the murderous results of the prevailing system—a system so appalling in its operation that two of the Judges had been compelled to say that they shrank with horror from the duty of sentencing convicts to the peni-tentiary. He admitted that the bill was but the first step in a reformation which was intended to lead ultimately to the employment of these convicts within the walls of the penitentiary, but the primary consideration of the advocates of the bill was humanity to this unfortunate class, which the State was bound in their ulter helpessness to protect them from utter helplessness to protect them from the inevitable results of this bloody sys-tem. If he could contribute to the overthrow of this system, and the ame-liferation of this unfortunate class, he would feel that he had done more in the service of the State than he had ever service of the State than he had ever hoped to accomplish, and he appealed to the higher sentiment of philanthropy and Christian duty of the members of the House, not to lorego the opportunity which the bill presented of wiping out so foul a blot from the proud escutcheon of the State.

of the State.

Mr. Blake of Abbeville opposed the views of Mr. Haskell, taking the ground that the very evils so eloquently portrayed by him and worse had, in the experience of the Western penitentiary management, resulted from hiring out the convicts. Incurable and loathsome diseases contracted within the prison had thus been disseminated through the commu out was everywhere being abaudoned.

Mr. Raysor, supporting the bill, said it was important to the State that the penitentiary should be self sustaining, but he was confident that there was no one in the House who would have it so at the expense of the humane treatment of the unfortunate criminals who were the subjects of its discipline. There could be no doubt that under the contract system great wrongs and enormitles had been committed and from past experience be regarded it as absolutely necessary for the protection of the con-victs that certain restrictions should be thrown around their management when outside the walls of the penitentiary. It would not destroy the contract system to do so, as the lessees now have to employ guards to supervise the convicts, and the bill only makes the guards directly responsible to the Superintendent and appointed by him. Mr. Lee said, if the underlying mo Mr. Lee said, if the underlying mo-tive of the bill was that of humanity to leased convicts, as claimed by its author, then it should prevent the leasing of convicts entirely; but the bill does not propose to do this, but continues and legalizes such hiring, but under such harsh restrictions as practically calls in all leased convicts and insures them em-all leased cowicts and insures them em-ployment on the Columbia Canal. The inconsistency of the author of the bill can only be explained by himself. If the leased convicts were called in, it must result in overcrowding the peniten-tiary, and in the lauguage of the Surgeon in his report "would be positively danger-ous to human life." The penitentiary would be no longer self sustaining, but an expense to the State. The existing an expense to the State. The existing laws carefully guarded the welfare of the convicts, it being the duty of the Superintendent and Surgeon to visit and inspect the camps. This duty had been performed, the annual report declaring that "the condition of the hands has been made as favorable as possible under the circumstances, the contractors always showing a perfect willingness to make any changes in their management or treatment suggested by myself or the Surgeon. There has been no recent complaint of inhumanty." In short, mortality among them; more labor for the Columbia Canal; larger appropria-tions for Hilled labor; improved imple-menta, engines and salaries to render

LITTLE ROCK, ARK., December 6 .-At half-past 10 o'clock to night, a pas-senger train on the Little Rock, Missis-sippi River and Texas Railroad, coming sippi River and Texas Italiroad, coming this way, when three miles below Little Rock, was stopped by five masked rob-bers, who switched the train off, took complete possession and went through all the passengers. Conductor Rice and express messenger Hunnicut were in the baggage car. The robbers opened fire as they went toward the engine, and both men were covered with revolvers. About 75 people were in the cars, and great excitement followed. All were ordered to hold up their hands, and the robbers then went to work. They have come then went to work. They broke open the express safe, and according to reports, got $2,000 and besides obtained from passengers watches, jewelry and money, $4,000 more. No indignities were offered to the passengers, and when they finished the robbers disappeared, after enforcing a promise from the passengers not to leave the train for ten minutes. A strong posse, headed by detectives, are in pur-suit. The train arrived at Little Rock about 11:30 o'clock. LATER .- Within twenty-four hours after the robbery the police succeeded in arresting four men on suspicion, and three of them proved to be the right ones. Their names are Cook, Clifford and Parker, all residents of Little Rock. Cook has made a full confession, and says there were only four men in the party. The robber not yet arrested is Kliue. The Young Folks Give a Candy Pulling. Atlanta Constitution.

Candy pullings are a nuisance, but I suppose we have to have them. I have now arrived at that age and frame of mind that I submit to anything—any-thing to please the children. And so when they got there mother's consent the when they got there mother's consent the matter was all arranged and the company invited without consulting me. There was a spare room in the house and as I had some writing to do I adjourned myself there to have a quiet time. While ruminating before the fire and smoking the pipe of peace and tranquility the young folks began to gather and before I knew it the young ladies were ushered into my room as a recention room, and I who has educated a number of the prominent men in upper South Carolina. Mr. Scudday studied law in the law office of Judge J. S. Cothran, at Abbeville, during the years 1877 and 1878, was admitted to the Bar in December, 1878, and immediately located at Anderson to engage in the practice of his profession as the resident partner of Col. J. S. Cothran, who was then solicitor of the Eighth circuit. The partnership continued until Col. was pursuing my sweetheart with love and hope and devotion, and I argued my side with earnest eloquence. But when I lost her and another fellow got posses-sion I flopped over to the other side. In

I lost her and another fellow got possession I flopped over to the other side. In a year or so I recovered and pursued Mrs. Arp with fear and trembling, and when I possessed her I was happy. The pursuit is a lively, interesting and uncertain business where a sweet young maiden is concerned, but the possession is solid and sure and never gives out.

We had a frolic at our country ecademy last week. The night you were all jubilitating in Atlanta we were quietly enjoying ourselves near our homes with our wives and our children. The ladies, God bless them, invited us to a supper in the academy, a splendid supper, a feast of good things with no headache in them. My folks killed a turkey and baked some cake and the nabors did likewise, and they got oysters somewhere and long tables were supposed and state it home to mamma. It seemed so tired, and pretty soon cried itself to sleep on my bosom.

It had slept tiere over an hour when I saw my own window. There were lights in them, and I supposed my wife had lit them, for my sake, but when I got into the doorway I saw something was the matter, and stord still with a dread fear of heart five minutes before I could lift the latch. At last I did it and saw the room full of neighbors and my wife amid them weeping. When she saw me she hid her face.

"Ob, don't tell him," she cried. "It will kill him."

"What is it neighbors?" I cried. "Nothing now, I hope. What's that you have in your arm?" Then they finished up with cills of fare, and to everything there was a price, but the savory smell provoked an appetite. After I had made them a little speech, which I had prepared for the occasion, one kind ledy manager conducted me to a seat and said I was her guest and the choicest viands should cost me nothing; with this assurance I partook amazingly and feasted to my entire content, and about that time another kind lady presented me my bill and called for a dollar — a whole dollar, and said I had oysters twice and turkey twice. I paid it with cheerful alacrity but somehow I don't appreciate so many managers on such occasions. Nevertheless I had the honor of being one fair lady's guest even though another of the members from Anderson County, was born in Ruckersville, Eloert County, Ga., on June 15, 1828. The Wee Cry in the Night.

My name is Anthony Hunt. I am a drover, and live nine miles away upon the western prairie. There wasn't a house in sight when I first moved there, my wife and I, and now we have not many neighbors, though those we have many neighbors, though those we have are good ones.

One day, about ten years ago, I went away from home to sell about lifty head of cattle—fine creatures as I ever saw. I was to buy some groceries and drygoods before I came back, and, above all, a doll for our youngest, Dolly. She had never had a store [doll of her own—only rag babies her mother made her.

The dishes are all daubed and hard to clean up again. The door knobs and dipper handles are sticky and they keep sticky as long as the candy lasts. But every pleasure has its drawback. After every repose the bed has to be made up. We ride and drive and then the horse has to be put up and fed. We dance to sweet music and have to pay the fiddler. We go on a picnic or an excursion and come home tired and weary. Every pleasure seem to be followed by pain or by trouble just as the night follows the of a coward that hides itself in most men showed itself to me then, but once more I heard the cry, and said I:

"If any man's child is bereabouts
Anthony Hunt is not the man to let it die."

I scarched again. At last I bethought me of a hollow under the hill and groped that way. Sure enough I found a little dripping thing that moaned and sobbed as I took it in my arms. I called my horse and the beast came to me and I mounted and tucked the little soaked thing under my coat as well as I could, promising to take it home to mamma. It but I think of it often in the nights and wonder how I could hear to live now if I had not atopped when I heard the cry for help upon the road, hardly louder than a squirrel's chirp.

That's dolly yonder with her mother in the meadow; a girl worth saving, I think; but, then, I'm her father rad partial, maybe; the pretticat and sweetest thing this side of the Mississippi.—

St. Louis Globe Democrat.

A Full Moon in His Room.

An extremely dignified elderly bache-lor who was wild in his younger days, but who has been a choice blossom of propriety lo! these many years, lives at our house this winter. There is an an-Democratic Convention which met in Baltimore in 1872, and which nominated Horace Greeley, for President. Col. Rucker did not vote for Mr. Greeley but supported him in the campaign that followed. He afterwards moved to Anderson, B. C., where he had a fine property. Was a member of the South Carolina Legislature from Anderson, from 1880 to 1882. He was defeated in 1882, but was again elected to the same office by a handsome majority in 1884. Col. Rucker is a fine speaker and a brilliant conversationalist. He will make, as he has always made, an active member of the Legislature.

Could throw is with three dies, and a retired with matronly dignity and said she didn't want the cake nohow. Well, the show what the show went on, and on until they got all our change and had enough money to pleaser the school house. There was good music there and the trustees were consulted by theyoung folks about a dance, just a little dance to wind up on, but they said "no," and they said it like they meant it, and I becken they did, and the young folks ourrendered and said, well, if we can't dance we can have a little twistification. Before anybody knew what that meant the floor was cleared and the music began and the twistification, too, and they been his normal nightly condition twenty. cient stovepips hole through the wall which divides the bachelor's room from Kharub tree, and are from their shape called in the Greek little horns. From the popular notion that they were the food of John the Baptist they are called good majority. He gained votes in every singles contest for the position he now holds.

If the nation gets an overdose I recken we will have to conform. If the nation gets an overdose I recken we will find it out sconer or later.

HILL ARP,

"You are the first Democrat President I ever saw," remarked a visitor to the President elect. "I am the first one in a representative, equipped with their photographs, to scarch the Rattern cities of the first bey peds, somewhat like those of the honey locust tree, from air to to inches long and one broad, lined inside with a gelatincus substance, not wholly unpleasant to the tests when thore oughly ripe. I have seen large orchard of the Knatub in Cyprus, where it is still?"

For women, willing to many them.
